

Copy-trading Congress, explained

Do the funds actually win

Follow the filings

Politicians must disclose their trades. Funds now package those disclosures into ETFs you can buy. 'Follow Pelosi's portfolio' went from meme to real product.

After fees, after delays

Do they beat the S&P 500? Sometimes, some years. But disclosures lag up to 45 days and fees take their cut. You are trading on month-old information with a middleman.

The viral version overpromises

The internet says politicians always win. The data says some do and some do not, and the tracking funds are ordinary performers with an extraordinary story.

Great story, mediocre strategy

Fun narrative, average returns. To capture the real edge you would need the trades in real time. By the time the filing hits, the move is old news.

Verified flow.
Zero hype.
